

BRMs™

BRMs™ - Botanical Reference Materials.

BRMs™ are well characterized Botanical Reference Materials for specific plants. ChromaDex™ offers a complete and growing product line of BRMs™ to provide users with the tools necessary to better evaluate botanical raw materials. ChromaDex™ current offers THREE different types of BRM tools:

- BRM – our standard BRM
- vBRM – Voucher specimen traceable botanical reference material
- rBRM – our new “representative” botanical reference material

ChromaDex™ will provide the characterization data necessary to verify the identity of each BRM, which may include TLC fingerprints, macroscopic, microscopic as well as traceability to a voucher specimen (if available).

We have also taken the BRM concept to a whole new level with our new rBRM™ (a trademark of PhytoTechnologies, Inc.), which provides a composite of multiple authenticated samples from indigenous and traditional sources, making a more truly representative BRM.

About rBRMs™

Traditional Chinese medicines and foods have been developed over millennia by precisely documenting herb identities, growing regions, harvesting methods, processing and preparation methods, traditional properties, toxicities, indications and efficacy, etc. This diverse totality that makes up traditional Chinese medicine cannot be captured by a single standard voucher specimen, but it can be very closely represented by an RBRM™. Thus, for research on the traditional properties and other well-documented aspects of complex traditional Chinese medicines, RBRMs are a prerequisite to obtaining reproducible and consistent results. While other reference materials based on voucher specimens from particular growing plots may be adequate for research on a known chemical or a targeted bioactivity, they aren't necessarily relevant in research on complex traditional Chinese medicines/foods because they are not representative of the diversity inherent in Chinese herbs and foods.
